

plant'n'relax[®]

Rosas advice on garden roses

You can plant both bare-rooted and potted garden roses in your garden.

The bare-rooted roses should be planted in October-November just before the frost sets in.

Potted garden roses can be planted both in the spring, summer and fall.

Roses should always be planted with the graft 7-10 cm below the ground to protect it from frost.

Roses like sunshine, space around them and good soil.

The roses need fertilizer 4 times a year: At the end of March and in the beginning of May, June and July.

Cut the roses in the beginning of April when the frost is over. The pruning will keep the roses beautiful and healthy for many years.